

Our basic plan was to create a web site that allowed users to select particular bird species from the Cornell data and then see graphs comparing occurrence rates compared to climate statistics including air quality,etc.